UNDER THE DRAGON'S EYES

Chinese Legation Ball Attended by the Fashionable World.

DECORATIONS WERE GORGEOUS

The Minister and Mrs. Yang Were Assisted by Mrs. John W. Foster in Receiving—America Complimented by the Use of Beauty Rest—Marine Band Hidden by Statly Palms—Elegant Gowns Worn.

The black dragon of China, with flaming eyes, erect and rampant on a gorgeous yellow field, was the first sight to greet the eyes as the fashionable world last night as it entered the doors of the Chinese legation.

Two immense flags of the country, decorated in this manner, were called into requisition as portieres over the main doorway leading out from the entrance to the main portion of the house and to the ladies' dressing-room on the second floor.

The same idea of national decorations prevailed elsewhere throughout the legation, so that one could with but slight stretch of the imagination picture themselves after crossing the threshold, as transported at once to the land of the Celestials. Over each of the many doorways opening out from the entrance hallway were hung immense pieces of native mandarin brocade, which, falling nearly to the floor on either side, was flanked in a series of balloon-like rosettes.

The guests, after leaving aside their wraps, entered the drawing-room on the right of the entrance and greeted the Minister and Madame Yang, with whom, assisting in receiving the company, stood Mrs. John W. Foster and Miss Ida Thompson.

Madam Yang wore a gorgeously embroidered gown of the richest colors, and upon her head was the scarlet hat always worn upon occasions of state, around the temples were little bunches of any colored flowers. With a smile and cordial greeting for each of the many guests Madam Yang ably supplemented the minister receiving and in making the company feel the genuineness of the welcome so prettily uttered. Mr. Biddle, of the State Department, made the formal presentation to the minister and his wife.

ROOMS BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED. The decorations of this drawing-room were quite simple, but in direct contrast to those prevailing elsewhere. In compliment to the great nation entertained, the vases on the mantels were filled with long-stemmed American Beauty roses. The mantels and chandeliers were garlanded with smilax, and about the room in the corners and bay-windows were tall palms.

For the evening the large reception room leading directly back of the main entrance doorway was used as the dining-room. On the table, laden with every delicacy, a happy intermingling of the flowers of the two nations represented, was arranged. This was an immense center-piece of American Beauty roses, with plaques of the odorous white Chinese lilies.

This room was at once one of the most densely crowded and most interesting in the legation. About the walls were ranged large square, elaborately carved teakwood chairs, over which for the evening were thrown gorgeous pieces of flame color satin, embroidered elaborately in gold. On the north side of the room was an immense Chinese divan of the same carved teakwood.

The two seats of state on this divan were also covered with the scarlet and gold embroidery, the back portion occupied with gold brocade ornaments. This divan is always used by the Chinese minister when receiving some especially distinguished guest. On such occasions the minister occupies one of the two seats, while the guest of honor is seated in the second place, at his right. The walls are hung with panels of gold extending from the ceiling to the floor. On these, in Chinese lettering, is the eulogistic address made to the Chinese minister by the Emperor upon the occasion of his birthday prior to leaving his native country. At one end of the room is a large photograph of the minister.

MARINE BAND BEHIND PALMS.

In all of the many drawing-rooms, for the evening, was hung a fringe of white satin embroidered in gold in the most elaborate manner. In the ballroom the bay window was hung with scarlet satin gold-embroidered portieres above which was a drape of yellow silk finished at either end with a series of large rosettes of the same. Over the doorway were strips of magenta brocade intermingled with bright green satin. At the north end behind a hedge of palms was seated the Marine Band.

Mr. Keller, of the State Department, had charge of the dances, twelve in number, consisting of alternate lancers and waltzes.

The chandeliers were festooned with garlands of wild smilax that also ornamented the walls of the ballroom.

In the drawing-room in which the receiving party stood the walls were hung with panels of dark blue silk, painted with ideal Chinese landscapes, among which silver and gold apes, birds, and curiously formed animals disported themselves and contended for supremacy with dragons of the most intelligent aspect. These were the work of a celebrated native artist and are highly prized by the minister.

The elegant gowns worn by the guests were selected and brought into happy prominence by the general gorgeousness of the surroundings no less than by the bright Oriental dressing of the various members of the legation, who by their thorough command of English contributed in no small degree to the pleasure of the company and success of the evening.

UNINVITED GUESTS KEPT OUT. Although the company was unswerving of the fact, every precaution had been taken to prevent any unpleasant repetition of the entrance of uninvited guests. Two well-known society men were detained by the diplomatic task of recognizing all invited guests, with the aid of a list of the company expected. Whenever there was found to be any one present whose name was not down on this list the secretaries of the company were informed and the uninvited guests were in turn informed that their presence was not desired, and the sooner the polite little notification of this fact was complied with the better for all parties concerned. The guests included the cabinet, the judiciary, the diplomatic corps, the leading Senators and Representatives with their families.
